

New limits take effect from
1 December 2026

What is a workplace exposure limit?

Workplace exposure limits are the maximum level of an airborne contaminant that most people can be exposed to without harm to their health.

Employers must ensure that workers and others at the workplace are not exposed to levels of airborne contaminants above the workplace exposure limits.

Apply the work health and safety risk management process to ensure you and your workers are protected from exposure to airborne contaminants.

WES >>> WEL

To learn more scan the QR code or visit www.worksafe.wa.gov.au/airborne-contaminants

